

DID YOU KNOW THAT.....

- The U.S. generated approximately 290 million scrap tires at the end of 2003, 27 million of which were disposed of in landfills or monofills.
- New Jersey alone, generates approximately 8 million each year.
- Scrap tires have many uses.
 - Tire derived fuel—a viable alternative to the use of fossil fuels.
 - Civil engineering applications—substitutions for gravel in trenches of septic systems; playground surface material, subgrade insulation for roads.
 - Ground rubber, (i.e. asphalt rubber) applications—joint or crack sealant, seal coat, rubberized modified asphalt concrete.
- Products such as floor mats, sporting goods, boat bumpers, new tires, brake pads & shoes, and numerous other products are emerging from scrap tires.
- Foreign countries are a huge market for the US export of scrap tires. Manufacturing of retread tires is quite prevalent in foreign countries. This commodity is also being used for fuel. In addition, many products are being produced from scrap tires.

Automotive Tires

Residents should check with their local service stations or garages.

Tires have a bigger impact on the environment than you might think. By maintaining them properly, you help conserve the energy and resources that would go into making new ones, prevent the pollution generated by tire production, save gasoline, and reduce the problems created when we throw them away. (They're bulky, don't decompose, and provide places for mosquitoes to breed.)
